SALARY SURVEY

Industry Compensation Tightens

Industry compensation saw a year-over-year decline from 2018 to 2019, with investment professionals experiencing the greatest drop.

Compiled by Josh Logelin, Managing Director, Specialty Consultants, Inc.

Beginning in April and continuing through June, Specialty Consultants sent an e-mail invitation and link to an online survey form to over 500 senior executives at student housing companies requesting 2019 salary and incentive compensation information from their companies. This was followed up with telephone calls requesting participation and a reminder e-mail. Additionally, the survey was sent to approximately 3,500 professionals representing a cross-section of the positions covered in the survey. The survey was also open to readers of studenthousingbusiness. com via a banner advertisement and participation was also encouraged through a sponsored post on LinkedIn that appeared in major student housing-oriented groups. The resulting information was compiled and analyzed to produce a statistical abstract of annual cash compensation categorized by company size (number of beds owned/operated).

After nearly a decade of growth that paralleled the transition of student housing from niche darling to multifamily mainstay, industry compensation experienced a year-over-year decline from 2018-2019, falling back to nearly 2017 levels. Despite several previous years of trending flat, the 2019 dip in compensation might come as a surprise to those who saw market conditions last year mirroring those of 2018; however, there were warning signs that the long-predicted student housing downturn was beginning, and some of those might be reflected in the survey's findings.

Investment professionals as a class saw the greatest drop in the survey (a 5.7 percent decrease in total compensation) during a year in which both capital inflow and transaction volume were down significantly from 2018. And not only was last year's transaction volume lower, the scale of those transactions had shifted from large portfolio sales to single-asset and small-portfolio deals. Large-scale ownership transitions are one of the primary drivers of employment changes in the industry, particularly in property operations. This might account for why management professionals also experienced a surprising decrease (-5.0 percent).
